Cellphone users hung up over fees

Lower Mainland Better Business Bureau has received 350 complaints against telecommunication companies, a 20 per cent increase over 2009

SARAH N. FITZGERALD
VANCOUVER@METRONEWS.CA

Mobile phone users in the Vancouver area are increasingly unhappy with their cellular service.

The Better Business Bureau (BBB) of the Lower Mainland has received 350 complaints against telecommuncation companies this year — more than any other industry.

"What we're finding is a lot of consumers are ... not (getting) the quality of service they were expecting."
KEVIN HOLLETT, BBB SPOKESMAN

Astor Stephens, 26, from Vancouver, said she wishes she could get a smartphone, but feels trapped by her current contract.

"I don't want to buy out this phone," she said, waving her flip-phone, "just to buy a new, more expensive one."

Kevin Hollett, spokesman for the BBB, said people have the right to the best deal, it just takes research.

He recommends people do their pre-purchase homework before choosing a new provider or product.

Campbell said he was stepping down because talk of his popularity — or lack thereof — overshadowed his policy, and not because caucus was pushing him out. He will remain premier until a successor is found. Story page 3.

Refresh time for Campbell

Premier plans to stay on as Vancouver Point Grey MLA ◐ Liberals cancel party convention this month, no date set for leadership convention

KRISTEN THOMPSON
@METRONEWS.CA

The premier seemed relaxed as he sat down to a packed room of reporters on Thursday and opened up about the toll his career has taken on his family and how the decision to resign was one he made with his wife.

"There's a sense of relief," said Gordon Campbell, who surprised the province on Wednesday by announcing he was ending his nine-year run as B.C.'s premier.

"People don't understand how much time and energy it takes to do a job like this."

Campbell said he plans to spend more time with his grandchildren and give his party and family a chance to hit the proverbial refresh button.

"When you get in public life, you take the good and the bad. The challenge is when the things that are said about me are visited on my (family)."

He added it had become particularly difficult to lead when every decision he made was weighed against the HST controversy.

"I can think of very few people if any that run for public office thinking they're going to try and do bad things to the country," Campbell said.

Gordon Campbell, in his own words

Highlights of Campbell's media address on Thursday:

On whether caucus wanted him out:

"I've always felt the support of the caucus ... When people are focusing on one person as opposed to what's best for the province, it's better to step aside."

On public opinion:

"Any party that tries to proceed on the basis of expedience or what's popular (is) not actually standing for what's ... in the best interest of the province."

On whether the new leader should set an election:

"We have set election dates in B.C. (and) I'd be surprised if a new leader changed that."

On what he would have done differently:

"People felt we had (the HST) on our agenda before the election ... and that's not the case. We should have done a better job at explaining. I've apologized to people for that because I think that is my responsibility."

New B.C. area code by 2016

British Columbia will likely run out of phone numbers by August 2016, prompting the introduction of a fourth area code to the province.

Shawn Hall of Telus attributes the shortage to technological innovations like cellphones, iPhones and BlackBerrys.

"Two decades ago, it was common for people to have one or two numbers, a home number and a business number perhaps. Now, people often have half a dozen or more phone numbers," added Hall.

The new area code would be the third added since 1996, and would join 604, 250 and 778. KYLE FARQUHARSON

The largest proportion of students in Emily Carr's voting history turned out to vote in the school's U-Pass referendum last week.

More than 60 per cent of Emily Carr students came out to vote between Oct. 25 and 28, and 98 per cent of them said yes to the U-Pass.

"The student response was overwhelmingly positive," said Samantha Lefort, chairperson of the Emily Carr Students' Union, adding students were glad to have the affordable transit option.

Nimmi Takkar, B.C. chairperson of the Canadian Federation of Students and a longtime advocate of the U-Pass, said it will save students $50 per month off the regular price of a transit pass.

That means "more food on the table and eight less hours of minimum wage work per month," said Takkar. That's eight hours students can dedicate to their studies, she added.

The student unions at Douglas College and Vancouver Community College will be following suit soon.

VCC will hold their referendum on Monday and Douglas will be calling their referendum within the next few days.

AIDS caravan visits city

Caravan organizer says there's 'great change afoot' at grassroots level

A caravan of young AIDS orphans and grandmothers arrived in Vancouver on Friday at the end of a two-month tour of Canada.

The Stephen Lewis Foundation AfriGrand Caravan is in the Lower Mainland to generate awareness about the HIV-AIDS pandemic in sub-Saharan Africa.

The goal of the campaign is to dispel three major myths surrounding the virus: nothing ever changes, aid is ineffective, and Africans are unable to help themselves.

Swaziland's Tsabile Victoria Simelane takes care of 30 orphans and coordinates local HIV-AIDS support groups.

"With the support of ... grassroots level foundations, we are going to see a change," said Simelane.

Generous pair gets spotlight

Nova Scotia woman diagnosed with cancer and her husband donate almost all of a $11.2M lottery win locally

The phone hasn't stopped ringing at Allen and Violet Large's home over news the elderly Nova Scotia couple has given away almost $11.2 million in lottery winnings.

Allen Large said they've been overwhelmed by calls from across the country since a story about their philanthropy appeared in the Halifax Chronicle Herald Thursday.

"We're not used to all this attention," Large said as he fielded another call at the couple's modest home in Lower Truro.

"We're just plain, old country folks."

The Larges won their fortune in a July 14 Lotto 6-49 draw and decided to give almost all of it away.

After taking care of their family, the couple donated money to area churches, fire departments, cemeteries, the Red Cross and hospitals where Violet, who has cancer, has undergone treatment.

Large, a 75-year-old retired welder, said they gave away 98 per cent of their winnings and banked the remaining two per cent "for a rainy day."

Word of the couple's astounding generosity has drawn interest abroad.

Tories want to throw the book at sex predators

New plan for minimum sentences, not house arrest

Victims of childhood sexual abuse are applauding a proposed bill to create mandatory sentences for sexual predators.

The law would see perpetrators behind bars instead of under house arrest.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson laid out the details of the Conservative government's proposal for tougher sentencing on Thursday in Toronto.

"It will ensure that child sexual offenders receive sentences that better reflect the seriousness of their crimes," said Nicholson.

Victims' rights organizations said they welcomed any change to sentencing rules, adding that for too long offenders have walked away from heinous abuse with just a slap on the wrist.

"What it's saying to victims is, 'We're listening, we care, you matter,' and they're not treating it lightly," said Ellen Campbell, a survivor of childhood sexual abuse and the executive director of the Canadian Centre for Abuse Awareness.

Campbell also said victims are reluctant to report abuse because they realize the punishment doesn't fit the crime.

"I'm like most survivors. I didn't come forward until I was in my 40s," said Campbell, adding that by the time she spoke out, her abuser had likely died.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

The crackdown

- The bill, tabled in Ottawa, would establish mandatory prison sentences for seven existing Criminal Code offences, including luring a child, sexual assault and aggravated assault.
- Conditional sentences such as house arrest would no longer be available.
- It would be illegal for anyone to provide sexually explicit material to a child for the purpose of committing a sexual offence, also known as "grooming."

Airbus's A380 fleet grounded

Qantas grounded its Airbus A380 fleet after one of the superjumbo jets blew out an engine Thursday, shooting flames and raining metal chunks before making an emergency landing in Singapore with 459 people aboard.

It was most serious midair incident involving the double-decker A380, the world's largest and latest airliner, since it debuted in October 2007 with Singapore Airlines flying it to Sydney.

Qantas said there had been no explosion, but witnesses aboard the plane and on the ground reported blasts. Officials in Indonesia said the engine trouble could not have been related to recent volcanic eruptions of Mount Merapi, some 1,300 kilometres to the east. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Convicted CIA double agent to plead guilty again

The highest-ranking CIA officer ever convicted of espionage was expected to plead guilty to additional charges that he tried to collect money from old contacts in Russia while in prison, a newspaper reported Thursday.

Attorneys for Harold (Jim) Nicholson filed notice Wednesday that the 59-year-old will plead guilty to a federal indictment accusing him of conspiring to act as an agent of a foreign government and laundering money, The Oregonian newspaper said.

The government accused Nicholson of orchestrating a plot to use his son to sneak messages from a federal prison in Oregon to Russian intelligence officials and collect a "pension" for his illicit service to Russia in the 1990s.

Refugee board not swayed by deserter

Ruling could lead to Joshua Key's deportation Key says he hopes to appeal Claims he joined army after being told he'd build bridges in Iraq

Canada's Immigration and Refugee Board has rejected granting refugee status to Joshua Key, 32, a deserter from the U.S. army who says he is haunted by atrocities he saw committed by American soldiers in Iraq.

"I find that the claimant is neither a ... refugee nor a person in need of protection," ruled Ken Atkinson of the board.

Key said that he still feels things will work out, although the negative decision surprised him. "Of course, I was optimistic and had high hopes," he said.

In its decision, the refugee board noted the U.S. is a democracy with human rights protections.

"The issue in this application is whether there is a serious possibility that the claimant would be persecuted, if he returned to the U.S.A. or that, on a balance of probabilities, he would be subjected personally to a risk to his life or to a risk of cruel and unusual treatment or a danger of torture, if he returned to the U.S.A.," wrote Atkinson.

"I find that there is adequate state protection in the U.S.A. and the claimant has not taken all reasonable steps to pursue the available state protection."

After fleeing to Canada, Key wrote The Deserter's Tale, in which he described seeing two civilians decapitated and their bodies desecrated. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

SANTA CLAUS IS DEAD

Other people's money

DAVID DESCÔTEAUX

This week, millions of Americans disgusted with politics demanded change. They voted for candidates who promised to reduce spending and force government to live within its means.

"Don't ask me how we're going to create jobs," said Rand Paul, a newly minted U.S. senator since Tuesday, before a Kentucky crowd last April. "It's you who will create jobs, if we get out of your way."

In Toronto, mayor-elect Rob Ford spent his career in city council denouncing his colleagues' spending and privileges. "Partying with taxpayer money is over," repeated the football coach during his campaign.

In England, David Cameron's new government is putting the state on a diet. He plans to eliminate 490,000 public jobs by 2015. A majority of the population supports him.

The era of bailiffs

Historically, politicians have always played Santa Claus, but those days are over, according to Éric Duhaime, co-founder of the Quebec Liberty Network, a grassroots movement that promotes greater freedom of choice and individual responsibility. "It's fun to play Santa, giving gifts and receiving thanks from everyone. But the kind of politician we need now, in Quebec and elsewhere, is a bailiff. Someone who will break down doors, twist arms and go get the cheques."

This kind of work is less glamorous. Ribbon-cutting ceremonies on bright, sunny days will be rare. It's not surprising that fewer and fewer people want to go into politics, according to Duhaime. "Historically, politicians were used to hearing, 'Thank you so much, kind sir, thank you for giving us roads and arenas. Thanks for putting it on my children's credit cards.' Today, the credit cards are maxed out."

The task will be difficult and unpleasant, but the mission is noble: Serving the needs of the people instead of the whims of well-connected interest groups. Taxpayers have had it with seeing their money used to bail out millionaire bankers, launch wars or placate unions.

In New Jersey, Gov. Chris Christie is so popular that many see him running for the U.S. presidency one day. His message: Let's stop making short-term decisions that dig us ever deeper.

"This year, many government employees will get an 11 per cent raise. It's going to cost New Jersey taxpayers $300 million, while thousands of these taxpayers just feel lucky to still have jobs. It's insane."

Santa Claus is dead. And that's a good thing.

One heck of a job opportunity

Need a job? Domino's Pizza Japan, Inc. is offering a lucrative part-time job in December. Domino's announced they'll be hiring someone for a one-hour job. The pay? A mere $31,000 US. They haven't announced any other details aside from the future employee needs neither pizza experience or education — only that they be over the age of 18. It's part of the marketing buzz around the 25th anniversary of the Japanese Domino's. Move to Japan now.

KRISTEN THOMPSON/METRO

▶ Model, singer and actress Stacey McKenzie in Yaletown.

5 MINUTES WITH: STACEY MCKENZIE

Stacey McKenzie is one of Canada's most recognizable supermodels, a unique beauty who rose to fame promoting the very traits industry leaders once said would keep her from the catwalk. Now she's a spokesperson for Psoriasis Connections, talking about the skin condition and the self-esteem issues that plague even the most beautiful women.

How has psoriasis impacted your life?
In the beginning I was very embarrassed by it and ... I had to turn down certain jobs. There's this perception that models have to be perfect. (But) this is (just) another flaw. Either I let it control me or I control my flaw. I have this condition and I'm still doing what I want to do.
What advice do you give to girls and women when you talk about self-esteem?
Growing up I was bullied a lot, was always called ugly and made fun of. I decided to love and own me first. It's important to not let people define who you are. You have the one vessel to work with ... Own everything about you, the good, the bad and the ugly.
Where did your passion for fashion and modelling start?
When I first saw that picture of (Jean Paul) Gaultier and Madonna when I was like six years old. I was like, "That's what I want to be, I want to be a model and I want to work for people like that man."
What were some of the biggest barriers you faced as you were starting modelling?
Having to prove myself to people. When I first started out I would go see the agencies and they were all like, "No, you're too funny looking, you're too weird." I had to knock down doors. My Calvin Klein campaign, I wasn't even on the call-back (list) and I just showed up and told them I was on the list. I (got) inside ... and that's how I got the Calvin Klein CK Be campaign.
What's been the highlight of your career?
When I first walked in to my casting with Mr. Gaultier ... the same man I saw in that picture when I was six years old. When I walked up to him the first thing he said was, "Elle est belle." My first show with him was with Madonna. She saw me and the first thing she said was, "You are gorgeous." It made me realize that dreams can come true.

Re: I looked at a girl ... and liked it (Nov. 2)

OTTAWA. I find Jessica Napier's immature comments to be deplorable. As a Canadian citizen, I should not have to be faced with such discriminating characterizations of my sexual preference. Let's reiterate — should a girl look at another girl and "want to get with her," there would not be anything creepy about it. Period. Having a same-sex crush on a close friend is also not "weird" — it's a wonderful compliment. Homosexuality is a perfectly natural sexual desire. To classify same-sex desire as being "creepy" or "weird" is absolutely wrong and disrespectful. MIKE ARTELLE

TORONTO. I went into reading (the column) with curiosity as I find the topic interesting, and think the subject of same-sex crushes, whether platonic or not, needs to get out there more to help those experiencing them to feel OK about it, but wound up disappointed. While it's fine to be clear about (a same-sex crush) not being a sexual feeling, is it necessary to imply that if it was a sexual feeling, it would be "creepy?" I find this offensive. Same-sex sexual attraction is not "creepy." It's totally normal and can even happen to people who label themselves heterosexual. JESSICA TAVARES

Metro Minute with B.B. King

B.B. King rocks the Lower Mainland for two nights beginning Friday when he plays the Red Robinson Show Theatre in Port Coquitlam. King, 76, has defined blues for more than half a century and has released more than 50 albums. The King of Blues still plays his music with as much passion as ever. Borrowing from the likes of Blind Lemon Jefferson and T-Bone Walker, King has developed one of the world's most identifiable guitar styles, one that includes vocal-like string bends and left-hand vibrato. His style has been a model and an influence on some of the world's greatest guitar players, including George Harrison, Eric Clapton and Jeff Beck. Tickets for the show run from $89.50 to $96. METRO

Monsters director is out to show how you can make a sci-fi blockbuster without breaking the bank ◆ Alien invasion flick being compared to District 9 ◆ Raises issues about American national security and border security issues

Creating movie Monsters for less

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Filmmaker Gareth Edwards is as confused as anyone about why Hollywood's special effects blockbusters cost millions of dollars to make.

"I'd love for you to ask that same question to (Hollywood producers) and say, 'Why is it so expensive?'" said the Emmy-nominated visual effects prodigy-turned-director recently in Toronto. "Essentially it's a guy on a computer in a room doing it. Who's getting the $10 million?"

With his thriller Monsters, Edwards is defying convention with his own sci-fi blockbuster that features a Mexico overrun by enormous octopus-like aliens. Impressively slick, the first-time filmmaker has proven that you can craft incredible effects that don't rely on an Avatar-sized bankroll.

"I genuinely don't know (how much it cost)," admitted Edwards while insisting Internet rumors the price tag was as low as $15,000 US are false. "We all got paid a wage so there's no way it could've been done for that, but probably the budget could've been close to that in terms of what was spent on-screen. It was a very low budget."

Monsters isn't only attracting attention for its cost-effective effects however. Comparing the film to District 9, critics are taking note of the movie's political subtext regarding American security and border policies — a distinction Edwards quickly downplays.

"It's really much more a case (that) I wanted to do this monster movie but I wanted it to be real and so you pull from real world situations," said Edwards. "(But) there's a lot of little parallels in there and I'm very happy for them to be there because I didn't want to make a film that was (just) entertainment."

Editing woes

▶ Garth Edwards

Largely improvised, Monster director Garth Edwards had a difficult time distilling Monsters into a watchable movie:

Big cuts. "We had about a hundred hours worth of stuff and the first cut was over four hours," said Edwards. "We stuck a big sign over the edit saying '90 minutes' because ... about one and a half hours into any movie, no matter how good it is, I do that thing where I look at my watch."

News in brief

Take one look at Pharrell Williams' resume — or scroll down his Wikipedia page — and you'll see that he's accomplished a lot.

But Williams, who is one-half of the genre-bending production duo The Neptunes and frontman for rap-rock trio N.E.R.D, said there's still so much more he wants to achieve.

"I'd love to work with Eminem. I'd love to do it," the 37-year-old Grammy winner said in a phone interview Tuesday from Seattle. "It just hasn't happened yet."

Movie review

Great cast gives boost to weak script

Due Date
Genre: Comedy
Director: Todd Phillips
Stars: Robert Downey Jr., Zach Galifianakis, Danny McBride

If Robert Downey Jr. and Zach Galifianakis weren't arguably the two biggest stars in Hollywood right now, Due Date wouldn't exist. The script is clearly a generic road comedy about an expectant father and a wannabe actor racing to Los Angeles that never would have been produced without the two stars signing on.

Granted, they brought along The Hangover director Todd Phillips who clearly added some inspired gags and improv sessions (Galifianakis' pre-sleep ritual and Downey knocking out a kid are two of the biggest laughs in the movies this year), but the funniest moments all feel tacked onto a tired central structure that becomes tedious shortly after it begins.

The biggest problem is that the Phillips wanted to tug on his audience's heartstrings rather than just going for belly laughs. That's fine, but Phillips lacks Judd Apatow's touch with gentle drama, relying too often on the skill of his actors to get through wince-inducing monologues. Galifianakis and Downey Jr. are undeniably fantastic and almost elevate the project over a half-hearted remake Planes Trains And Automobiles, but not quite. Due Date is certainly funny and worth seeing, but just doesn't reach the comedic heights of The Hangover and that wasn't exactly a high bar to reach.

Megamind
Genre: Animation
Director: Tom McGrath
Stars: Will Ferrell, Tina Fey

With an assortment of pop culture references and some hilarious, clearly improvised voice work on behalf of its stars Will Ferrell and Tina Fey, Megamind is one of those rare family gems that win over both young and old.

The story of a bumbling but brilliant supervillain that reluctantly takes on the role of public defender after he regrettably defeats local hero Metro Man (Brad Pitt), Megamind may be a familiar premise, but director Tom McGrath (Madagascar) works the comedic elements smoothly and keeps the visuals exciting. He and the stellar voice cast are clearly having a good time and the energy rubs off

Father of My Children
Genre: Drama
Director: Mia Hansen-Love
Stars: Chiara Caselli

Based on a true story, Father of My Children is as unsentimental as it is shocking. Impossible to fully explain without blowing a key twist, the film tells the story of a family that must deal with their loving father's actions when he goes bankrupt. The movie's tone and simplicity might be best summed up with the inclusion of the Doris Day song, Que Sera, Sera.

STEVE GOW

A Drummer's Dream
Genre: Documentary
Director: John Walker
Stars: Nasyr Abdul Al-Khabyyr, Dennis Chambers

A Drummer's Dream is just that: a film sure to thrill anyone obsessed with the drums while flying over the heads of everyone else. The documentary captures a weeklong retreat that combined some extraordinary session drummers from around the world with a collection of talented students. Each of the musicians gets a chance to share their philosophies on drumming and life.

PHIL BROWN

Fair Game
Genre: Drama
Director: Doug Limon
Stars: Sean Penn, Naomi Watts, Sam Shepard

Doug Limon (the man fired from The Bourne Identity series) almost returns to form with Fair Game, a political thriller about Joe and Valerie Plame Wilson. Valerie worked for the CIA before being ousted and ruined by the press after her husband Joe published an article in the New York Times deriding the fast-tracked Iraq War. Limon attempts to streamline the ugly truth into a tense thriller and while the pacing definitely works, too much detail has been sacrificed.

PHIL BROWN

For Colored Girls
Genre: Drama
Director: Tyler Perry
Stars: Thandie Newton, Janet Jackson, Whoopi Goldberg

Writer/director Tyler Perry returns for his eighth movie since 2007. Since he doesn't strap on a dress to play Madea that means it's one of his depressing dramas and this one is a doosey. Interweaving the stories of eight main characters, Perry ensures that every possible tragic cliché befalls the protagonists.

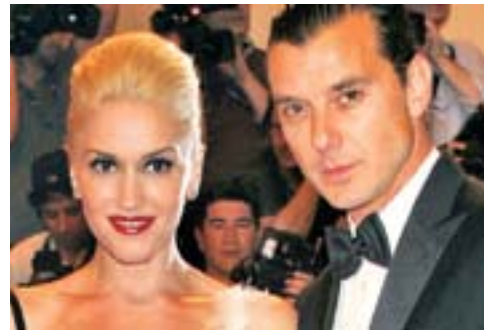
Is it adoption for Gwen and Gavin?



Gwen Stefani and Gavin Rossdale are reportedly considering adoption for their third child, hoping to bring home a little sister for sons Kingston and Zuma, according to Hollybaby. The singer admitted in an interview earlier this year "it does seem weird" that they haven't had a daughter yet and that she and Rossdale have been putting "a lot of energy" into getting pregnant again. Lovato leak lands criticism

Demi Lovato's mother and step-father aren't too pleased with her dad, Patrick Lovato, for talking to the press about his daughter's entering a treatment facility — especially since Patrick reportedly hasn't seen her in two years. "No one speaks for Demi except for her designated representatives," the young Disney star's lawyer tells Page Six. "Unfortunately, several people have taken it upon themselves to speak out — both on and off the record — about a situation they know nothing about." METRO

The history and origins of cake

A fundraising bake sale at the college where Krystina Castella teaches gave her the incentive to write a book about cakes from around the world. International students brought Korean, South African, Indian Eastern European and Middle Eastern cakes for the event. "I discovered that cake is tied to every culture in terms of celebration," says Castella, 43, a professor at Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, Calif. "Where other foods are specific to certain countries I discovered in my research there are cakes in every single culture." What is enduring about Castella's A World of Cake is that it is not only a cookbook, but also a historical lineage of traditional cakes from region to region. Readers will find cake history as well as information on sweet delicacies from such far-flung places as Africa, the Indian subcontinent, Latin America, Eastern Europe and Asia. From the research for her previous baking cookbooks, Castella had many contacts across the world and was able to communicate by e-mail to ask for recipes. "People ask me if I travelled to all the countries to sample the more than 150 recipes in the book, and all I can say is, 'I wish.'"

▶ Sweet potato chocolate cake packs a healthy punch.

Cake can be healthy too

This moist and scrumptious chocolate cake is infused with the goodness of sweet potato. It makes a uniquely delicious end to a special dinner and is a source of fibre and vitamin C.

Sweet Potato Chocolate Cake

Preparation:

1. Preheat oven to 180 C (350 F). Over a saucepan of boiling water, place frozen sweet potatoes in a steamer basket and steam for 12 minutes or until very tender. (Make sure there is a gap between the top of the water and the bottom of the steamer basket.) Place sweet potatoes in a large bowl and mash using a potato masher. Add chocolate and let stand for 2 minutes or until melted, then stir to combine. Let cool.
2. In another large bowl, beat butter and sugar until fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time, and beat in vanilla. Beat in sweet potato mixture.
3. In another bowl, whisk together flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Stir into chocolate mixture until combined. Scrape into parchment paper-lined 3-l (13-by-9-inch) baking pan and spread evenly in pan. Bake for about 25 minutes or until cake tester inserted in centre comes out clean.
4. Immediately after cake comes out of oven, sprinkle chocolate chips over top of cake and let stand for 2 minutes. Spread evenly, then sprinkle with toffee and pecans. Let cool. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

Cry me a river, onions are good

Onions are a member of the Allium family and are rich in sulphur-containing compounds that emit a pungent odour and can cause some to cry when cutting them. But don't cry too hard: Rich in sulphides, onions can provide protection against the development of tumors in areas such as the stomach. Put five on it: Canucks win

▶ Members of the Canucks celebrate a goal by Ryan Kesler (17) in the first period of Thursday's game against the Avalanche.

CANUCKS	AVALANCHE

Backup Cory Schneider stopped 33 shots, Ryan Kesler scored the first of three power-play goals and the Vancouver Canucks won their fifth straight, beating Colorado 3-1 Thursday night.

Henrik Sedin and Raffi Torres also scored on the power play for the Canucks, while Daniel Sedin added two assists.

David Van Der Gulik scored his first NHL goal late in the game, spoiling Schneider's bid for his first career shutout.

The Canucks gave starter Roberto Luongo the night off, starting Schneider for the first time in nearly two weeks. Schneider hardly looked rusty, shutting down the top-scoring team in the league to move to 3-0 this season.

Colorado came in averaging 3.5 goals a game, but couldn't generate many scoring chances on the Canucks. Chris Stewart was bottled up most of the night, snapping his streak of at least a point in eight straight games. In that stretch, Stewart had eight goals and six assists.

Can Buono salvage Lions' season?

A veteran Vancouver broadcaster once offered a private opinion on Wally Buono's tenure as coach and general manager of the B.C. Lions.

"When he got here, a lot of people thought Wally was God," said the person, who has since retired.

"Well, a lot of us are turning into atheists."

Harsh? Maybe. But it does explain why questions swirl around Buono's future with the CFL team.

The Lions (7-10) are in danger of missing the playoffs for the first time in 14 years.

For Buono, who has won more games than any other coach in CFL history, it would be only the second time in his 21-year career with Calgary and B.C. that he's missed the playoffs.

Buono admits this season has been a roller-coaster of emotions.

"It's been frustrating, it's been exasperating, it's been confusing," he said after practice Thursday.

"There still have been rewards.

"You see the progress of the team, see the progress of a lot of the very good, young players. To see the leadership of the veterans, to see this team didn't quit on itself was rewarding. We would like to have a good conclusion."

The Lions, who are tied with the Edmonton Eskimos, need some help to make the playoffs. B.C. must win its final game of the season against the Hamilton Tiger-Cats (9-8) on Saturday (TSN, 10:30 a.m. PT), then hope the Eskimos lose to Saskatchewan.

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Listen to what friends and relatives have to tell you today, especially if they are giving you advice on your finances.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You've had your doubts about a relationship for some time but those doubts will be eased considerably today. There may be a few tears but they will most likely be tears of joy.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You cannot think of everything yourself and anyone who gets annoyed with you because you have overlooked some small detail must be reminded of that fact today. If they don't like your efforts they are free to link up with someone else.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 The urge to start something new is extra strong at the moment but because Venus, planet of emotional and material values, is moving retrograde you must make sure you will be able to finish what you begin.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Family issues are once again looming large and you will have to deal with a relative who does not seem to be making a very good job of controlling their emotions.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 2 You cannot control each and every situation you find yourself in and the sooner you accept that fact the sooner you will be able to move on from your current negative situation.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Venus, your ruler, is going through one of its retrograde phases, which means you should stop trying to call the shots and let others take the lead.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Are there forces outside our everyday reality that look over and protect us? You have often felt invisible hands guide your actions. Let them guide you in the right direction again today.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 You don't lack for strong opinions but you do sometimes lack for tact in expressing them. It's not so much what you say that matters as the way in which you say it. Say it with love.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Just be yourself and wonderful things will happen. You may spend more than you can afford on luxuries you don't need but in the greater scheme of thing that's a minor sin.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 You will get all the encouragement you need today. Friends and family and work colleagues will go out of their way to praise you and encourage you to make more of your talents.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 A relationship may be going through a tough time at the moment but stick with it. While Venus, planet of affection, continues to move retrograde others will act in strange ways. SALLY BROMPTON
